TO REPAIR BRIDGE ON JACKSON STREET

Bids Will be Received Immediately for the Repair Work on the Second Street Bridge. Plans and specifications for the repairing of Jackson street bridge were presented by City Engineer C. V. Keach to the commissioners at their regular meeting held Tuesday afternoon. The plans call for a large amount of work to be done because of the condition of the bridge at the present time.

The commissioners ordered that bids be invited on the proposition immediately so that the work may be started in the near future.

The superintendent of streets was instructed to repair several of the streets of the city. They are: Monroe from Glen to Walker, Prairie Avenue from Walker to St. Mary's, and Yuba from Hines to St. Mary's Avenue.

The report of the municipal court, police department, health officer, plumbing inspector and the board of education were received and placed on file. The report of the board of education was ordered published.

ONE THOUSAND POUNDS OF CARP ON SALE THURSDAY

One thousand pounds of carp will be put on sale Thursday morning at the principal fish market on West Milwaukee street. Due to the unexpected demand for the five hundred pounds which was sold last week, the increased order was placed by the city officials. The carp will be sold at six cents a pound instead of five cents, the price charged last week.

LOOMIS WRITES OF LIFE AT THE FRONT

ORSON LOOMIS, FORMER JANESVILLE BOY, WRITES OF HIS EXPERIENCES ON THE WESTERN FRONT.

LETTER IS INTERESTING

Says it Has Rained For a Week and Has Not Had His Clothes Off For Two Weeks.

Dr. E. A. Loomis, of Prospect Avenue, received a letter yesterday from his son, Orson Loomis, who is a member of an ambulance corps in France. He tells of life on the battle-front. He tells of the dangers in a most vivid manner. His letter, which was written at three o'clock in the morning, is an abri on the western front follows:

"In an abri in France, Oct. 12, 1917. "Dear Father, It is 3 a. m. and I am sitting in an abri, only a short distance from the German lines. This abri although thirty feet under ground, is large and roomy, and when you take into consideration what is going on outside it seems like a regular seventh heaven."

"This post can be used only at night as the road leading to it is in sight of the Germans, who are not very reliable. In picking out the kind of vehicles to shoot at. About a week ago one car was made into kindling wood by a Boche shell, but no one was injured as the driver was in this safe little retreat, some thirty feet from the surface. Day before yesterday we had to make a trip up here, the day time on a special road. Although the road is up like the face of a smotipox victim, I didn't linger along the way any, as I expected few hot seconds. Men say you can read by the light of one of these shells two miles away, and I believe it."

"This is only a few of the many many things we see and experience every day or night. We have to put up with a lot, but we do so cheerfully as long as we have work to do and no experience to go through."

"The other day I had a Madras soldier in my car. He was dressed in the French colonial khaki, more yellow than ours; had a helmet like the French and shoes like fiddle boxes. A little tuft of hair occupied a spot on his chin, and his white shirt was spread out over his black face. He had talk of civilized language, and although he was about as low down the scale of human being there could be. In his belt he carried a knife that was a cross between a meat cleaver and an immense short sword. He pointed it at me and said 'Boche capture' and made motions as if it pointed that knife down through the middle of my head clear to the belt. A grin as big as the mouth of the Amazon spread over his face but he said nothing. I don't wonder that the Boche dread to see them come over the top. They are good troops for an attack but are absolutely worthless for holding trenches."

"It's time to feed my face, so I'll have to kick off."

ALLEN DEARBORN AND CARROLL COON IN FRANCE

Word has been received in this city of the safe arrival in France of the Rainbow division, of which Allen Dearborn and Carroll Coon are members. The 14th Field Artillery, being the only Jamesville boys in that company, indicated that they had a pleasant voyage, are feeling fine, and with the type of troops in that division they figure that it will be a short time for the Germans from now on.

HIGH SCHOOL COMPANIES LEARN MANUAL OF ARMS

Members of the two high school military companies dined this evening for the first time with the rifle which is the property of the Sixteenth Separate Company, Wisconsin State Guards. Kenneth Parker, who has had considerable training along military lines, instructed the boys in the manual of arms. The boys were adept at learning and soon had the fundamental movements mastered. Due to the fact that only forty rifles were furnished the companies alternated in the use of them.

POSTPONE CASES OF CITY LAW-BREAKERS

A hearing of City Attorney Causes the Postponement of the Four City Ordinance Offenders.

Henry Newton made his second appearance in one week before Judge Maxfield this morning in the municipal court on a charge of drunkenness. He told the same story this time and the judge handed him the same sentence of $15 and costs.

When Newton appeared before he gave the name of Jones and said that his home was in Wauau. Following the payment of his fine for the first offense, he evidently went out to get drunk again, as he was arrested the following day.

Two brothers, August and Charles of Edgerton, were both in court this morning on charges of drunkenness. Both entered pleas of guilty, but they did not receive the same sentences. August was given thirty days and Charles ninety days.

Due to the absence of City Attorney Charles Lange, the cases of the men arrested for driving motorcycles on the sidewalks on South Main street, were adjourned until next Wednesday. At that time the four cases will be tried, three for young men riding motorcycles and one for driving an automobile on the sidewalk. The young men to be tried for riding the motorcycles are Loren Ormsby, Harold Culver and Shirley Fisher. Ernest Bullock will be tried for driving his automobile on the sidewalk.

Three judgments have been rendered in the municipal court by Judge Maxfield. W. C. Corbin, plaintiff, was granted $10.74 from W. B. Regal. Robert Reiman was rendered judgment of $83.52 against William Bobo. In the case of Elmer Jensen vs. August Christensen, the plaintiff was given judgment of $50 in part payment for a motorcycle.

New York City has been cited as an example of the alleged hoarding. Last year that city used up to 12,700,000 tons of anthracite, while this year it is clamoring for 13,900,000 tons. Whether this condition is true of other cities remains to be seen, but it is thought by officials that a confiscation of excess amounts of coal will help materially in bringing about a settlement of the fuel crisis.

MILLIONS SPENT ON GASOLINE IN FRANCE

Paris, Nov. 7.—Discussion of extravagance and waste in war expenditures during the recent debate on the appropriations for the fourth quarter of this year in the Chamber of Deputies developed the fact that France is paying the equivalent of $10,000,000 a year for gasoline. The uptake of cars placed at the disposition of the military authorities outside the war zone is caused to about $500,000 a month during the year.

Emmanuel Brousse, who is sometimes called the "watch-dog of the treasury" remarked that part of this waste was due to the fact that motor lorries intended to carry loads of from three to five tons were used to transport single cases weighing no more than a hundred pounds.

Another speaker declared that discarded stallions belonging to the state are sold by the Agricultural department at the equivalent of $70 to private individuals who subsequently sold them to the war department for the equivalent of $300.

It was also asserted that in purchasing 40,000 horses in Africa the government lost about $100,000.

It was claimed that these horses were bought in the United States at $80 to $100 head and cost $140 to $160 when the freight and feeding were paid, but that the French government paid $300 each for them.

Another deputy pointed out how some of the measures adopted with a view to economizing food products had involved extravagance. The appointment of officers in each department to supervise the distribution of the services allotted by the government, with a compensation of four cents a hundred weight for their services, it was calculated, would cost from $40,000 to nearly $400,000 in each department, and there are eighty-seven departments in France. Thus a simple service of supervision, had the plan been carried out, would have made eighty-odd fortunes for as many millionaires.

In spite of these isolated cases of wanton waste, it was declared on the other hand that the government has in most departments connected with the war effort realized economies running into hundreds of millions of francs a year.

FEW VETERANS WILL TRY FOR POSITIONS

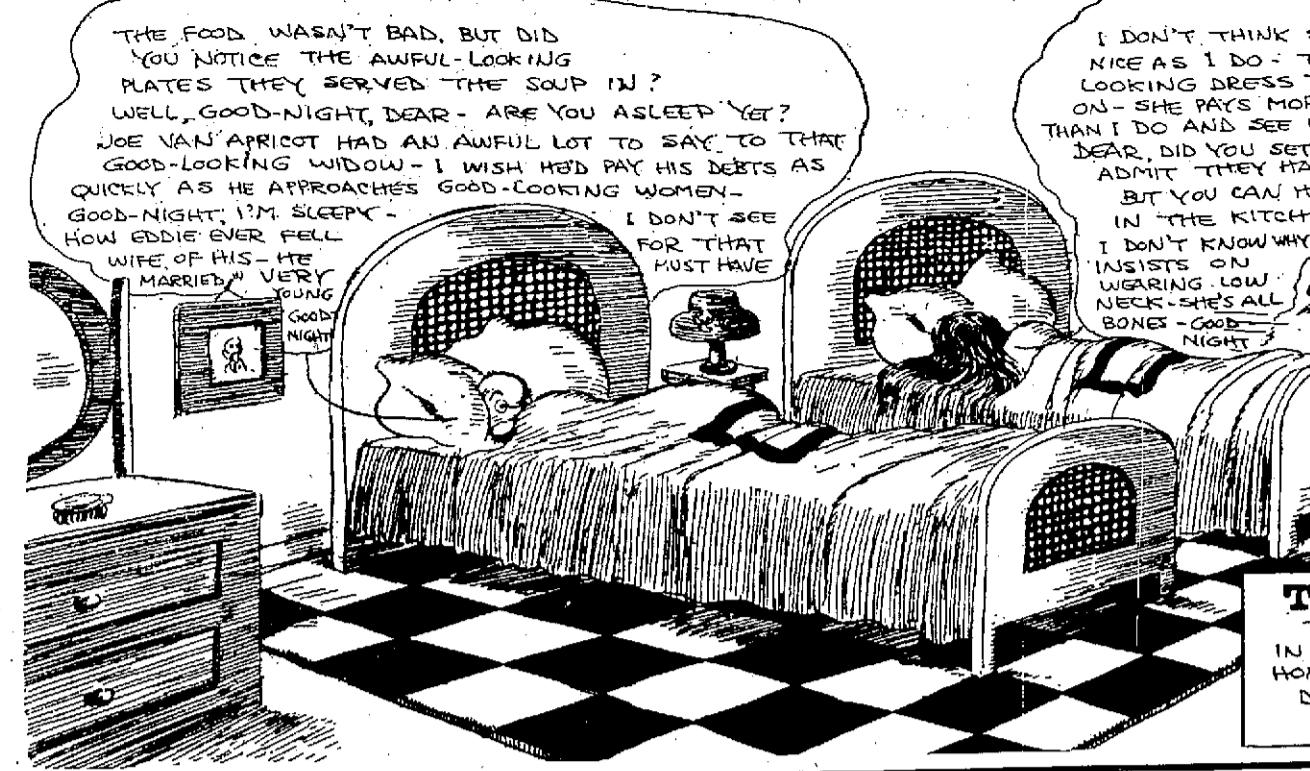

Madison, Nov. 5.—Nearly all the veterans of last year's team have either graduated or have enlisted in the service of Uncle Sam. Paul Meyers, the crack guard is now in France. Carlson and McIntosh are army officers. Olson and Lewis graduated to "Vic." Hemming has not returned to school this year.

In viewing the prospects for a winning team this year there are many discouraging things confronting the new Coach, J. C. Lowman, who takes Dr. Meanwell's place as basketball coach at the University of Wisconsin. Chandler, Captain of last year, has been unable to report for practice because of an injured knee. At the present time there is considerable anxiety that the injury may keep the star center out of the game this semester.

Many promising men are at present occupying a berth on the varsity football team. Among these are Simpson, Gould and Kelley. In some of the promising material for thearsity squad, however, present ineligible, has been removed from the list. The team may look for a team that will put Wisconsin near the top of the conference list.

New York fans and writers who have panned the White Sox for using ruff stuff in the world's series, had better pluck the beans out of their own eye. It is true that White Sox fans like Heine Zimmerman a lot for riding in Chicago, but the Sox themselves didn't behave so incisively as did Fletcher of the Giants, for example. Fletcher and one or two others of the Giants are the sort of players that run amuck whenever and one kids them a bit and others "rowdies" of the White Sox gave them a little gain between the lines that kept them right up in the air. Howland was not enough to see the advantage in the hot-headedness of these and he stirred them enough to make them fretful. But there is no reasonable defense for some of the rough riding and such like of which the one or two Giants were guilty.

Sport Snap Shots MORRIS MILLER

Harry Greb, the Pittsburgh middle-weight star, is not afraid of anyone near his weight but he is reasonably superstitious. Greb was matched to meet Al McCoy, the alleged middle champ in New York a while ago and when McCoy backed out in tribute to Greb's hard slams, the promoters tried to replace him with a soft-tissue Indian. When Greb got news of the plan he forbade the bans. The idea made him mournful. "Not so you could notice," said Greb. "About the time I'm beginning to git his jaw this here Indian bird pulls out a tomahawk maybe. And then curtains for Harry. Nothing doing. I only fight white guys and not cannibals."

Lew Tendler, the Philadelphia southpaw boxer, thinks he would like to go after the lightweight crown and that a match with Bennie Leonard would be nice. Tendler has always been a hard boy to beat mostly because of his off side jabbing and his awkward style. The other day he handed Rocky Kansas a nifty lacing although Kansas has been slipping a bit within recent months at that. Just the same Tendler is no cinch for anyone although he could afford to put a little more meat on his bones as he has been regarded heretofore as a featherweight and a rather light feather at that. . . .

The story is told of a fight manager who had a large white hope under his care and the hope was keen on getting his name in the papers. It appears that he coaxed his manager to get him lots of newspaper mention, hoping to take in many nickels thereby, but the manager did not find it easy to comply. The big boy didn't amount to much, it seems, and the papers were not straining themselves to talk about him. But the fighter continued to coax his manager for more publicity and the manager found a neat way out when he discovered that the boxer couldn't read. He clipped at random to pieces and handed them to his bantler. The big boy was very pleased with this and treasured all of his dope, pasting it away in a scrap book. "All I know is," said the manager later, "that if this big bird ever learns to read I had better start running."

Few of the boxers now in the army have enlisted. And of those that have enlisted there are very few that are paid huge sums for one bout. Most of those who have gone in of their own free will were prelim boys although Pete Herman, the bantam champ, and Joe Welling, the lightweight star, are two enlisted men. The rest of the stars now serving as boxing instructors in the army have not enlisted but were merely appointed for the work and were not so much spunking in the army. However, they are giving up quite a bit of their time when they might be taking in large change in easy bouts and let us give them all credit. That's quite a bit more than lots of ball players have done.

It is pointed out that Bennie Leonard is one of the few real lightweights the ring game has known for some time. At different times Leonard has been charged with weighing at least 140 pounds and with having little regard for the real lightweight limit of 133. But the truth is that Leonard has never weighed above 135 and can weigh 133 with ease. Ad Wolgast was the smallest of the weight champs and he weighed 133 when right and never more than 135 when right and never more than 137 when wrong. Not so you could notice. "About the time I'm beginning to git his jaw this here Indian bird pulls out a tomahawk maybe. And then curtains for Harry. Nothing doing. I only fight white guys and not cannibals."

Fred Fulton will have to take care to draw a color line if he is to have the chance he yearns for to meet Jess Willard. There are two large dark clouds looming in Fulton's path and unless he is careful to avoid them he will never get near the heavy title. One of them is Harry Wills, the Adonis, and the other is Kid Norfolk, the bantam champion. Wills has promised a year or so ago of becoming as prominent as Langford, Jeannette and McVey, but a defeat or two at the hands of these colored rivals seemed to set him back. At the same time Wills is well thought of by lots of promoters and there's little doubt that he has quite a bantam, Fulton. Wills worked well for his last bout with Carl Morris. He showed footwork and feinting skill that was way ahead of anything Fulton had. Kid Norfolk has been bowling over everyone in the east and begins to find it hard to get matches. He is a light heavyweight, but able to handle men heavier than himself. Wills or Norfolk would cause Fulton a lot of worry if he was ever so reckless as to take them on.

One of the many alibis in defense of Heine Zim's celebrated bone in the world's series is a recent one stating that Umpire Bill Klem was the only person near the plate and that Heine decided he would better try to tag Collins himself rather than throw the ball to Klem and expect Klem to tag him. Of course, that one is meant more or less humorously, but many an explanation has gone forth in Zim's defense proving that it was not his fault at all, but Bill Rariden's, who should have been covering the plate. Some have said that Rariden was nowhere near the plate, as he should have been. However, since Zim has admitted that it was his fault entirely and that he wouldn't have the ball to Rariden even though Bill begged him, it appears that the thing had better be dropped. Most everyone is tired of hearing it mentioned. Particularly Zim.

The dope shows that the bumble N. Y. Yanks made at least one error last season. They came up from behind and won more games in the ninth inning than any other team in the American League. Twenty-one of the Yanks' victories were won in their last turn at bat.

OVER THE TOP.

Rock county is bound to do its share toward the funds needed for carrying on the great work of the Y. M. C. A. in the army camps and even in the vicinity of the fighting front on the foreign shores. With the young men of the county, scattered among various camps, some now in France and others on their way, it is a matter of civic pride to give them the best we have. One had but to listen to Captain Stone of the national army now stationed at Camp Grant, to appreciate just what the Army "Y" means to the soldier. Read of the great work that such an establishment is doing for the boys from Rock county down at Camp MacArthur. Take a peep into the letters from the "boys somewhere in France," and see the necessity of those "Y" huts. This war is not going to be won by force of arms alone, but by clean men who have displayed their patriotism by enlisting and who must come out of this strife as clean morally and physically as they were when they entered Janesville's shore. Fifteen thousand dollars and Rock county, as a county, must raise thirty-seven thousand. Remember that the money contributed to this fund is of more value to the men it is to be expended upon than the actual cash placed in their hands. The value of this work can not be overestimated and there must be a ready response to the appeal for financial aid. Make your donation as liberal as possible and know that it will be well spent for the benefit of the men who are fighting your battles for you, whether in camps on this side or across the seas. The campaign is on. Be one of those who are going to aid the boys to go "Over the Top."

WHAT DO THEY WANT?

That German-Americans who still sympathize with Prussia will find it hard to answer the question which former Ambassador James W. Gerard asks in his Milwaukee speech.

"What do these people want?" he asks. "Is it devotion to the Fatherland that they feel? Do they want to go back to Germany? If life in Germany was so agreeable, to them why did they leave it? Do they want to go back to be shooed off the shelves by German officers or be struck in the face with a whip?"

These questions must have arisen to every one who has met those few Germans who still hold an allegiance to Prussia. What do they expect to gain by this double allegiance? Do they expect to make it pleasant for their children in this country, or do they want their children to go back to Germany? Do they think this country would be a better country to live in if Germany won? Do they think it would be pleasant for Germans in America because of the attitude that those few are now taking? What is it that they expect to accomplish by their present position?

TEACH 'EM TO SHOOT.

A field artillery officer writes home from France to one of the army publications, urging the war department to give our men plenty of artillery practice. Each division of the national army, he says, should have a school of field artillery, similar to that conducted at Fort Sill, Oklahoma.

This officer argues that the fall and winter are a good time for artillery work, since ranges can then be had on farm land with less interference with farm occupations and the life of the people in the neighborhood. He complains that there is far too little knowledge of artillery in the army.

All this sounds like good stuff. In the days when we were far from thought of war, it was almost impossible to get congress to appropriate money for big guns and ammunition. There was plenty of money for movable post offices in isolated hamlets. Artillery practice was regarded as about like July Fourth celebration, a harmless but useless patriotic blowout. It does cost money, and congress never saw how it would help its members get re-elected.

The educated army men have of course studied the proposition out of books. But actually conducting big gun fire must be another story. When you read that it is the duty of the artillery to fire from far in the rear over the heads of the line advancing to attack, the necessity of precise accuracy is apparent. The soldiers who go over the top keep but a few yards behind their own fire. Any irresponsibility in the work of the guns would murder our own troops.

Artillery fire is an enormous saver of human life. It pulverizes the enemy's trench system and greatly reduces the resistance the enemy can offer. We shall apparently have a good supply of shells along the trench line. It needs trained skill to make these shells do their work.

KEEPING A PIG.

Mr. Heuer says we are all to keep a pig. Well, well, well! How this does bring back our boyhood! How well we recollect the subterranean porker Dad used to maintain or the famous pen at our country cousin's. Any live hog has a peculiar feeling for the pig. He doesn't have to be prohibited the privilege of digging in the dirt. Nor does he have to be sent upstairs with bread and water for putting his feet in the trough.

And then those joyous days when the pig escaped his pen, and the whole neighborhood dropped their regular occupations and joined the chase. That was some sporting event. Just why they have to chase a pig at picnics cases is not clear. His soft and slippery hair is elusive enough without any external application.

And then the fellow's speed. Who would dream that such a short and spindly-legged creature could distance the runners of the neighborhood? And that quirky and abbreviated tail, so many times grasped, so often slipping through your fingers.

Then there was the juvenile pastime of poking Master Pig with a fish pole, understood in the boy would be an excellent promoter of exercise and digestion on his part. No country home was complete for the boy then without him, and there was loneliness when he was gone.

Our modern towns are too parlorized for keeping a pig. We are too fearful of the barnyard odors on which our forefathers grew fat. But the pig is not necessarily dirty. When cleaned up for a cattle show, he has his own silvery or dusky beauty. But we stick him in dirt and pour swill over him and then blame him for being a hog. But we need his meat, and in villages and suburban districts there are many who could well follow Mr. Hoover's suggestion.

We often wonder how many O. Henrys there are in this country at the present time. Jack Left, the only original "second O. Henry," by accumulation and a plea of "guilt," is in midst. He lives out in Seward and smokes Home Run cigarettes. Also the third, fourth, fifth and O. Henrys have been here. If anybody else wants to make a claim, the best he can get is seventh place. O. Henry was the second Guy de Maupassant. Jack is the "second O. Henry." What relation is Jack to Guy? Is he the third Guy de Maupassant, or was Guy the first Jack Left? Really these literary men are most annoying.

One OF THESE INDETERMINATE SENTENCES.

The old adage, "History repeats itself," was once more demonstrated this morning by a good piece of detective work by members of the Corning police force, who arrested James Dunn, brother of David Dunn, who was electrocuted for the murder of Harry Edwards in Corning, for an assault upon Frank Nakamura, bartender at the Hotel National, Monday night, for the purpose of accomplishing a robbery upon circumstantial evidence that in some respects was strikingly similar to that which led to the arrest of David Dunn for the murder of Edwards—Elmira, N. THE SHAME OF FAILURE.
The thing that hangs with failure is not the battle lost.
When you have fought for victory and bravely paid the cost,
When you have given all to win and done the best you could,
Defeat is not a shameful thing, the struggle is the failure who looks back upon the test
And knows defeat is his because he didn't do his best.A man may lose the fight he's in and still retain his pride.
If he can stand before the world as one who truly tried.But he who does not spend his strength in striving for success, Must reap from failure deep regret and anguish and distress.And looking back upon the field where sinks the setting sun
He finds the memory of the things he could and should have done.We pray for victory and yet should fall some day, come, And captives we must march in grief unto some German drum,
How great the shame of us will be who had so much to give
And yet refused to stake on all that liberty might live!Too late, too late that day will be to answer freedom's call,
Then bitterly we shall regret that we refused our all.If we as failures face the world with all we had overthrown.
If we have fought with all our might and all the strength we own,
And still must bow to grim defeat we may depart in pride.Remembering the way for truth we fought and bled and died,
But, oh, how great the shame will be if then we must recallWe might have won, but failed because we would not give our all.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

To the Editor: In answer to a recent editorial in the Daily Gazette, and to the citizens of Janesville relative to the cause of the delay of the street paving work on South Main street and Franklin street, I am sure that the explanation of the conditions will be sufficient to show the reasons.

The question of securing labor has been the prominent feature in the delay of the work. Although the contracts were let to the companies during the month of May they have been unable to get the work done. The paving on Bluff street was completed during the latter part of the month of August, according to the plans. At this time it was possible to secure plenty of labor and in addition only one contracting firm was busy in the city at that time.

At the present time the contracts on Main street and Franklin streets are in the hands of different companies and they are endeavoring to get the work completed, with the result that the demand for labor has been too great to supply both firms. During the past week, however, there has been a noticeable increase in the number of men applying for work, which may be accounted for by the fact that the laborers from the farms and other places are coming to the city.

The weather has also been the cause of the delay. The men could not do their work on the inclement days, of which we have many. Cities throughout the state have been handicapped to a great extent as is shown by the work in Whitewater and Beloit. In Beloit, Liberty street, which was ordered paved last year along with several other streets, was only completed a short time ago. In Whitewater the work of paving one of the main streets progressed until the shortage of labor forced the business men of the city to aid in the handling of the brick to complete the work.

On Main street the laying of the brick on the east side of the street will continue this week and if the weather is good it should be completed by the end of the week. As soon as it is completed the men will begin laying the brick on the west side of the street starting at the north end of the portion which is being repaired.

The city street department is not the only one that has been handicapped by weather conditions, as the local sugar beet factory was forced to close because the farmers were unable to take their beets from the ground.

Supt. of Streets.

Tuesday.

If any of the two hundred men and women who listened to Captain John T. Stone of Camp Grant, at the Y. M.
C. A. Tuesday noon, had any doubts as to the necessity for the establishment of Y. M. C. A. huts in all the army camps, they changed their opinions and became enthusiastic believers in the scheme.

It was the opening gun in the campaign for the purpose of raising funds for the establishment of Y. M. C. A. huts in every military camp, whether in this country or on foreign shores, for the use of the men of the great armies this war has brought into existence.

she will spend the winter with relatives.

Heart and Home Problems

BY ELIZABETH THOMPSON

LETTERS MAY BE ADDRESSED TO MRS. THOMPSON, IN CARE OF THE GAZETTE

dear Mrs. Thompson: I am a girl twenty-two years old, and have been going with a young man who is now twenty-four. I am very much in love with him. Recently, however, he has made some other friends and he doesn't come to see me as often as he used to.

When I first went with a few months ago he said he loved me very much. I am a stranger in the city. He lives and has been here for some time and got acquainted with some young men and he told me that I knew too many for the time I have been here.

When he takes me to a dance he speaks and flirts a great deal with other girls and I get very jealous. Although I think he does about the same, because when I speak to a fellow he is always tells me about it.

(1) Do you think he still loves me? (2) What can I do to make him think of me as much as he used to? (3) Do you think he is trying to get rid of me?

(4) Do you think I ought to make dates with other young men if I get the chance? PHILLIPS.

(1) You must remember that men often use many idle words when they are with girls. When he said that he loved you he may not have meant it at all. It all depends on how he said it, and you ought to be able to tell. He probably likes you, but doesn't want you to take his attention too seriously. Yes, I think he probably cares as much for you now as he did any time.

That depends on how serious the affair is. If you feel that you love him enough to marry him and that he would be a good husband to you, you must act accordingly. When you talk to other girls don't show that it bothers you at all, but turn your attention to other men. If you are both jealous of each other, it probably comes from you in this case, and still he may not be bad about showing it. He may be just trying you out to see how you will take his attitude.

(3) No, I don't think he is. If he had that intention he could easily enough show it so that there would be no doubt in your mind. He certainly wouldn't take you to dances and places if he wished to get rid of you.

(4) Since you are not engaged to him, yes.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I would like to know a few things that might lighten one's life work and make things a little more easy.

(1) Would one who having only a grade school education, after having worked ten or twelve years at housework, be able to obtain anything or much knowledge from a correspondence course?

(2) Would you name a few authors of some instructive books and the name of some good magazines?

(3) Can anyone obtain private advice from the problem editor?

HOUSE AND HOME KEEPER.

(1) Yes, certainly.

(2) Charles Dickens, George Elliot, William Shakespeare—there are many standard classics. Go to the library and ask the librarian for a list of the world's best books. She will recommend to you good books to read after you talk with her a little while, and tell her what sort of reading you prefer.

There are many very good magazines nowadays. Among them are the Century, Harper's Magazine, Scribner's, and among the weeklies, Leslie's Weekly, Saturday Evening Post, Every Week, Colliers, etc., etc.

(3) If you have a question on which you want advice, but do not want your letter published, send me a stamped envelope with your address written on it.

EVERYDAY ETIQUETTE

(Miss Hoyt will answer in this paper all questions on matters of etiquette addressed to her in care of this paper. If a personal answer is desired enclose a two-cent stamp.)

Copy to go with Mat No. 6 . . . It is permissible to take the last helping of any dish offered.

It is not unusual for the house to be no provided though.

MRS. K.—You certainly should send notes of thanks to all the people who remembered you with gifts of flowers during your illness. Your note might take such form as this: "My Dear Mrs. Brown: Please accept my thanks for the lovely flowers you sent me during my illness. I did enjoy them so much! They were beautiful and fragrant, and I am sure they hastened my recovery." To those who write you notes expressing kind wishes for your speedy recovery, you should send short notes also, thanking them for their good wishes.

MIRIAM: The young man who dropped the note in your lap in the street car was very pleasant. The presence of mineral salts in food has nothing whatever to do with the question of existence hereafter. If, as he says, he admires you, and wishes to become acquainted with you, he should get someone who knows both, and who can bear witness to his good character, to introduce him.

There are many very good magazines nowadays. Among them are the Century, Harper's Magazine, Scribner's, and among the weeklies, Leslie's Weekly, Saturday Evening Post, Every Week, Colliers, etc., etc.

(3) If you have a question on which you want advice, but do not want your letter published, send me a stamped envelope with your address written on it.

Letters of Widowers

By ZOE DECKLEY

Mrs. Curtis Bond to Miss Kate Oseway.

KERRYVILLE, Kan., Sept. 30. Dear Kate:

I got your wire asking if anything was the matter. It comforts me to think you care. After all, a woman needs a woman friend, no matter how happy her marriage may be. There are so many things a man can't understand. And I'm ready to confess I'm not happy.

The reason I didn't answer your dear old fool letter is simply because I couldn't. That sounds silly. But the quarrel between Curtis and me, which you made fun of, nor that I'm blaming you, don't you see, the contrary, your fun and comments did me a world of good! had a more serious aspect than you know.

It was a three-cornered fuss: Curt, his mother and I.

Curt and his mother adore each other. Mrs. Bond would willingly have her teeth and eyes taken out and made into jewelry for Curt if it would please him. And Curt admires his ma because she has always been the man of the family (she had to be, pa being a darling but a dreamer) and feels she can do no wrong.

Well, I lost my temper when I made him into this quarrel, and asked her why she permitted her son to marry an educated, accomplished woman if what he wanted was a farm drudge! And that I should think he would be proud of me as I am, and not expect me to be several women in one, all in a minute.

She replied that education didn't have to deprive a person of common sense; that "gumption" was what I needed and a willingness to learn the place in life.

Kate—mind as I was, that set me thinking. You will give me credit for ability to see my own faults, won't you? Well, partly because I know I am an imperious, hoity-toity

Household Hints

MENU HINT FOR WHEATLESS DAY

Breakfast.

Stewed Peas with Lemon Slices.

Uncoked Cereal.

Raisin Graham Rolls. Coffee.

Luncheon.

Onion and Potato Soup.

Bread Croupons.

Cabbage Salad.

Dinner.

Panned Oysters on Toast.

Cold Sliced Beef.

Lyonette Potatoes.

Brussels Sprouts.

Apple Brown Betty.

GRAPE PUNCH.

To make grape punch, pour one cupful of boiling water on a half pint of grape jelly, and stir until it is dissolved; when cool add one quart of lemon water and the juice of two lemons, and one lemon cut into fancy shapes. Sweeten to taste.

FOR MARRIED FURNITURE.

When furniture has become marred touch up the spots with iodine to bring back the color, then rub with furniture polish.

RUSTLESS GAS STOVES

To keep a gas stove from rusting after blacking the stove apply a thin film of floor wax with a soft cloth.

It will not only keep it free of rust but will give it brilliant polish.

KEEP IRONS HOT

If you would retain the heat in your irons while ironing, use a brick for an iron stand, rather than an open-work iron stand. Use a white brick if it is convenient.

THINGS WORTH KNOWING.

Hint For Motorists—To keep raindrops from the windshield when driving through a storm, rub surface of windshield with kerosene and the raindrops will roll off the glass instead of staying on and obstructing the view.

To Test Eggs—Place them in a deep pan of water; if eggs are strictly fresh, they will sink; if they are bad they will float; if stale, they will stand on end.

IMPROVING HAMBURGER STEAK

Before frying hamburger steak add some leftover boiled potato around the meat. Fry in the usual manner. This will make the meat light and give it delicious flavor.

STEAMED BREAD

Mix one-half cup flour, one-half cup rice flour, one cup graham flour, one cup corn meal, two cups milk, two one-half cups seeded raisins, one cup boiling water, one teaspoon baking soda, one well-beaten egg, one-half teaspoon salt. Steam steadily for four hours in greased mold, then turn out and bake twenty minutes, or till dry enough to cut easily.

SALMON MOLD

Salmon mold is a delicious dish which requires one salmon, one cup of soft bread crumbs, two tablespoons of melted butter, two eggs, juice of one-half lemon, pepper and salt. Mince the salmon; add the other ingredients and cook five minutes. Pack in a mold lined with slices of hard boiled egg. Chill and serve on a bed of salad.

CIDER CUP

Cut an orange into three slices and put in pitcher with two tablespoons of granulated sugar.

VINOL REMOVES THE CAUSE OF CHRONIC COUGHS

A Constitutional Remedy That

We Guarantee.

ALL OVER—it is the easiest thing you can imagine to get rid of blackheads. They can be removed in a few minutes and if you don't want to eat some powdered nextroot at the drug store, for fifty cents, mix some of it on a wet cloth and rub it on the blackheads. Then look in the mirror and try to see them—you'll be surprised.

MOLLIE G.—You can now be naturally beautiful instead of a painted up counter girl. Use my beautifying cream. This is made by melting the hairs with a solution, which you can get at any drug store, for one dollar. It always works, and the hair is very thick or downy. Your youthful appearance will surprise your friends. —Adv.

MRS. O. G. H.—To get rid of those disagreeable chinkinesses in nearly all face powders, I have had my own face powder made at Valeska Suratt Face Powder, at drug stores for fifty cents. It is white, white and pretties right. I do you to find a powder more exquisite in fineness.

WHY—hereafter, if your druggist hasn't the epox for wrinkles and the beta-quinol for the hair, just send fifty cents, which is the price of either of them, to me, to Valeska Suratt, 1700 Wisconsin Building, Chicago, Ill., and my secretary will supply you by mail at once.

AGING—can guarantee you will get rid of those wrinkles, crow's feet and forehead wrinkles in only a few days, you can be sure of this. You can even grow younger as you grow older. It produces the most remarkable results you can imagine. Mix two ounces of epox and two tablespoons of glycerine. It takes a pint of water to mix it. You will get wonderful results to those who have known starting effects to be obtained with this cream on very wrinkled faces in a week's time. The skin turns fresh, plump and youthful again.

FOR HAIR—make over a hair that is soon gone over by yourself. To obtain the result you must use the cream faithfully every day, applying it thick.

MISS G. G.—You can find nothing better for a head-wash and shampoo than a simple, one teaspoonful of epox and half a pint of water. It clean's and scalp's the hair and anything else known. You can get enough epox for twenty-five cents to last a good many weeks.

MRS. M. O. N.—A really wonderful war-medicinal instead of a painted up counter girl is to dissolve them.

WE, using my beautifying cream.

Beyond the Frontier

I cannot describe my feelings—joy, sorrow, memory of the past overwhelming me. My eyes were wet with tears, and I could find no words. D'Artigny seemed to understand, yet he made no effort to speak, merely holding me close with his strong arm. So in silence, our minds upon the past and the future, we followed the savages through the black night along the dim trail. For the time I forgot where I was, my weird, ghastly surroundings, the purpose of our stealthy advance, and remembered only my father, and the scenes of childhood. He must have comprehended, for he made no attempt to interrupt my reverie, and his silence drew me closer—the steady pressure of his arm brought me peace.

Suddenly before us loomed the shadow of the great rock, which rose a mighty barrier across the trail. Its crest outlined against the sky. The Indians had halted here, and we pressed forward through them, until we came to where the chief and La Forest waited.

50,000 VOICES

And Many Are The Voices Of Janeville People.

Fifty thousand voices—What a grand chorus! And that's the number of American men and women, who are publicly praising Doan's Kidney Pills for relief from backache, kidney and bladder ills. They say it to friends. They tell it in the home papers. Janeville people are in this chorus.

Here's a Janeville case: F. C. Samuels, grocer, 930 McKey Boulevard, says: "I know from personal experience that Doan's Kidney Pills are all right. My kidneys didn't act as they should and I had backache and pain across my loins. I used two boxes of Doan's Kidney Pills and was relieved. Since then I haven't had any more backache and my kidneys have been doing their work right. I think just as highly of Doan's Kidney Pills now as I did a few years ago when I first recommended them."

Price, 4¢, at all druggists. Don't singly ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mr. Samuels had. Foster-Milburn Co., Prop., Buffalo, N. Y.

A CLEAR COMPLEXION

Ruddy Cheeks—Sparkling Eyes

—Most Women Can Have

Says Dr. Edwards, a Well-Known Ohio Physician

Dr. F. M. Edwards for 17 years treated scores of women for liver and bowel ailments. During these years he gave to his patients a prescription made of a few well-known vegetable ingredients mixed with olive oil, naming them Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets. You will know them by their olive color.

These tablets are wonder-workers on the liver and bowels which cause a normal action, carrying off the waste and poisonous matter in one's system.

If you have a pale face, sallow look, dull eyes, pimples, coated tongue, headaches, a listless, no-goed feeling, all out of sorts—inactive bowels, you take one of Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets nightly for a time and note the pleasing results.

Thousands of women as well as men take Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets—the successful substitute for calomel—now and then just to keep in top condition.

10¢ and 25¢ per box. All druggists

There was a growing tinge of light in the eastern sky, enabling us to perceive each other's faces. All was tense, expectant, the Indians scarcely venturing to breathe, the two white men conversing in whispers. Sequitah stood motionless as a statue, his lips tightly closed.

"Your scouts ventured no farther?" questioned D'Artigny.

"No; 'twas not safe; one man scaled the rock, and reports the Iroquois just beyond."

"They hide in cover where I suspected them; but I would see with my own eyes. There is crevice here, as I remember, to give foothold. Ay, here it is, an easy passage enough. Come, La Forest, a glance ahead will make clear my plans."

The two clambered up noiselessly, and outstretched themselves on the flat surface above. The dawn brightened, almost imperceptibly, so I could distinguish the savage forms on either side, some standing, some squatting on the grass, all motionless but alert, their weapons gleaming, their cruel eyes glittering from excitement. La Forest descended cautiously and turned toward me.

"Madame, D'Artigny would have you join him."

Surprised at the request I rested my foot in his hand, and crept forward along the smooth surface until I lay beside René. He glanced aside into my face.

"Do not lift your head," he whispered. "Peer through this cleft in the stone."

Before us was a narrow opening, devoid of vegetation, a sterile patch of stone and sand, and beyond this a fringe of trees, matted with underbrush below so as to make good screen, but sufficiently thinned out above, so that from our elevation, we could look through the interlaced branches across the cleared space where the timber had been chopped away to the palisades of the fort. The first space was filled with warriors, crouching behind the cover of underbrush. Most of these were lying down, or upon their knees, watchfully peering through the cleft in the rock, every nerve in my body throbbing. All had been intrusted to me; it was to be my signal which would send D'Artigny, La Forest, and their Indian allies forward. I must not fail them: I must do my part. Whatever the cost—even though it be his life—nothing could absolve me from this duty.

Had I not known where they were, even the position of the gates would have been a mystery. Yet I lay there, my eyes peering through the cleft in the rock, every nerve in my body throbbing. All had been intrusted to me; it was to be my signal which would send D'Artigny, La Forest, and their Indian allies forward. I must not fail them: I must do my part. Whatever the cost—even though it be his life—nothing could absolve me from this duty.

The Iroquois were massing toward the center, directly in front of the closed gates. The change in formation was made with all the stealthiness of Indian cunning, the warriors creeping silently behind the concealing bushes, and taking up their new positions according to motions of their chiefs. Those having rifles loaded their weapons, while others drew knives and tomahawks from their belts, and held them glittering in the gay light. The white leader remained beside the big tree, paying no apparent heed to anything excepting the stockade in front. The daylight brightened, but mist clouds overhanging the valley, while floating wreaths of fog drifted between the great rock and the fort gates, occasionally even obscuring the Iroquois in vaporous folds. There was no sound, no sight of those hidden below, waiting my word. I seemed utterly alone.

Suddenly I started, lifting myself slightly on one arm, so as to see more clearly. Ay, the gates were opening, slowly at first, as though the great wooden binges made resistance; then the two leaves parted, and I had a glimpse within. Two soldiers pushed against the heavy logs, and, as they opened wider, a dozen or more men were revealed, leaning carelessly on their rifles. Boisrondet, bearing gun in the hollow of his arm, stepped forward into the opening, and gazed carelessly about over the gray, mist-shrouded scene.

The arm of the white renegade shot into the air, and behind him the massed Iroquois arose to their feet, crouching behind their cover ready to spring. I reached over the rock edge, and dropped the handkerchief.

I must have seen what followed, yet I do not know; the incidents seem burned on my memory, yet are so confused I can place them in no order. The white renegade seemed waiting, his arm uplifted. Ere it fell in signal to dispatch his wild crew to the slaughter, there was a crash of rifles all about me, the red, dare leaping into the gray mist—a savage yell from a hundred throats, and a wild rush of naked bodies.

I saw warriors of the Iroquois fling up their arms and fall; I saw them shrink and shrivel, break ranks and run. Surprised, stricken, terrified by the warwhoops of the maddened Iliini, realizing only that they were caught between enemies, their one and only thought was escape. Two of their chiefs were down, and the white renegade, stumbling and falling as though also hurt, dived into the underbrush.

Before they could rally, or even comprehend what had occurred, their assailants were upon them. Leaping across the open, over rock and sand, yelling like fiends, weapons gleaming, in the dull-light, the frenzied Iliini, enraged with revenge, maddened with hate, flung themselves straight at them. Rifles flashed in their faces, tomahawks whirled in the air, but nothing stopped that rush. Warriors fell, but the others stumbled over the naked bodies. I saw D'Artigny, stripped to his shirt, and in rags from the bushes he had plunged through, his rifle barrel gripped, a yard in front of them all. I saw La Forest, bare headed, and Sequitah, his Indian steed, forgotten in mad blood lust.

"By grace of the king," he said firmly, "I am again in command of Fort St. Louis."

We made our way slowly through the fringe of woods, and across the open space before the fort gates, which still stood open. Cassion had disappeared; indeed, there was not so much as we can see nothing. You understand?"

"Surely, monsieur; I am to remain here and watch; then signal you when the fort gates open."

"Ay, that is it; or if those savages advance into the open—they may not wait."

"Y-e-s, monsieur."

His lips touched mine, and I heard him whisper a word of endearment.

"You are a brave girl."

"No, monsieur; I am frightened, terribly frightened, but—but I love you, and am a Frenchwoman."

He crept back silently, and I was left alone on the great rock, gazing out anxiously into the gray morning.

CHAPTER XXV.

The Charge of the Iliini.

It seemed a long time, yet it could scarcely have exceeded a few moments, for the light of early dawn was still dim and spectral, making those savage figures below appear strange and inhuman, white, through the tree barrier, the more distant stockade was little more than a vague shadow. I could barely distinguish the sharp-pointed logs, and if any guard passed, his movements were indistinguishable.

Had I not known where they were, even the position of the gates would have been a mystery. Yet I lay there, my eyes peering through the cleft in the rock, every nerve in my body throbbing. All had been intrusted to me; it was to be my signal which would send D'Artigny, La Forest, and their Indian allies forward. I must not fail them: I must do my part. We made our way slowly through the fringe of woods, and across the open space before the fort gates, which still stood open. Cassion had disappeared; indeed, there was not so much as a single guard at the gate when we entered, yet we were greeted instantly by his voice.

"'Tis well you return, M. de Tonty," he said loudly. "I was about to call those soldiers yonder, and close the gates. 'Tis hardly safe to have them left thus with all these strange Indians about."

"They are Illini, monsieur—our allies."

"Pah! an Indian is an Indian to my mind; bid M. de la Durantaye come hither." He stared at D'Artigny and me, seeing us first as he stepped forward. A moment he gasped, his voice failing; then anger conquered, and he strode forward, sword in hand.

"Mon Dieu! What is this? You here again, you bastard wood ranger? I had hopes I was rid of you, even at the cost of a wife. Well, I soon will be. Here, Durantaye, bring your men; we have a prisoner here to stretch rope. De Tonty, I command you in the name of France!"

The point of his sword was at D'Artigny's breast, but the younger man stood motionless, his lips smiling, his eyes on the other's face.

"Perchance, monsieur," he said quietly, "it might be best for you first to speak with this friend of mine."

MILK PROPOSITION FULLY DISCUSSED

INTERESTING ARTICLE ON MILK
SENT IN BY FOOTVILLE MAN.

TAKEN UP IN DETAIL

OREN S. DAY Writes on Topic That is Worth Careful Consideration by All Citizens.

In the following article, a communication from Oren S. Day of Footville, the writer has taken up the milk situation and stated his own personal views on the subject. Just at this time it is interesting to note the conclusion he reaches and how the communication is as follows:

Since when and by what course of reasoning has it been learned that cows' milk used as a food for the human race is cheaper, more accessible or available from 20 to 30 cents per quart than from 12 to 16 cents per quart?

Every dozen years a lot of politicians get together and decide that the time has come to twist the tariff's tail again. They talk, write and agitate a spell. Then they get together and operate upon the tariff to suit—people bleed, suffer and repeat.

With respect to the apparent effort being made to fix the price of milk at the present time, would it not be a wise course on the part of the people, if possible, to get interested and awake and in season and try to reverse the usual way of doing, and their suffering and repenting first, before too much operating takes place?

There seems to have been on the part of these politicians to operate on the price of milk, either for a most thoughtful or real information as to conditions under which milk is produced at the present time or a fine indifference coupled with total disregard.

The lost 40 per cent of a whole complete dairy carion fed a dairy cow is available for the production of milk. The last 40 per cent of a real dairy cow's milk is available for the production of milk for the reason that the first 60 per cent of a cow's ration the cow retains and makes use of for the welfare, upkeep and needs of her own dear body, and under no other condition can a dairy cow produce and keep up the flow of milk.

The dairy cow takes her first little roll of 60 per cent of a good, liberal ration, balanced as we say, to her bodily needs. Then she gives to her liberal master and to the world the milk that's produced by the other 40 per cent.

It matters not whom you are or whence you come, you cannot fool the old cow. She requires just 60 per cent of a liberal, balanced ration and if she does not get that, then she has lost interest in the reason, as before stated, the cow takes her toll first.

The flow of milk for the winter's supply must of course come from the cows that are now fresh in milk. Others soon to be fresh in milk. On the preceding end of their business as a whole, or lot of her right, though there is not more efficient, keener line of business than the men in the dairy business. They know how to do what to feed, when to feed, and those little variations in occasionally changing the feed; how to substitute one food for another when so required by each individual cow, or to save in the cost of production, they know by long experience the different feed values and cost of different feeds necessary and combining a complete, liberal and balanced dairy ration.

The best thing they know and the very essential thing they all know best is to keep up and continue a full flow of milk from the dairy cows, they know they must not wait for one day or one hour to feed the cow right up to the full limit of her requirements. Even on one short of that last 40 per cent left off and down from that flow of production of milk.

It is neither the intention or desire of the writer to make a long, exhaustive communication on the subject; many things must be omitted but one condition should be considered. The dairy business is a very expensive one to enter and be successful, and it is also equally expensive to retire from, especially on short notice. The best authority, the best breeders themselves inform us that starting with the best grades of purebreds of the host that are usually bought as foundation stock, that it takes nine or ten successive generations of dairy cows, using the best producing stock obtainable, to produce dairy cows that can be depended upon to both produce and reproduce a fair percentage of dairy cattle of good quality.

It requires twenty-two long, weary years to breed nine successive generations of dairy cows, several high priced sires, and the cost of feeding each calf up to the time when she comes into milk and produces a full flow of milk to thirty months of age.

Here is the required thing of the dairymen throughout the whole country, "to do the people, the largest possible amount and flow of milk to help on the food supply."

Never have the dairymen had a more promising or more productive selection of cows, fresh or soon to be fresh in milk and capable of doing their part.

Ample time is in sight and available to feed each of these cows a liberal, full per cent of required feed to produce and hold a full flow of milk. Now has there been a time when the dairyman, knowing fully the needs of the present time of every ounce of milk possible, has made more careful provision and plan in his business with the determination to "do his bit" and part. When like a bolt of lightning out of a perfectly blue sky, this "indicates" that seems to strike right down in the dairyman's pathway and demands "to do the people the largest flow of milk even in the last ounce, but do this at your risk and absolutely regardless of cost to you, the dairyman."

The pretext for said ruling is that "that part of the people who must afford milk as a food can least afford it at a higher cost, an argument."

Why, if that is the real object and result wished for, why or why not use of the poly-certain means to drive the price of milk so high that no part of the people, even millionaires, can afford milk as a food?

Supposing its costs the dairyman exactly three dollars of his savings (the same by them by hard work and great self-denial) to produce a pound of milk, now you have to him, "Keep that up, so feed your cows that they will produce to their full flow and limit and hold that flow up, if you can't have but two dollars for your hundred pounds of milk."

The real dairyman, with real dairy cows, knows that he must feed each and all 100 per cent of a liberal ration, 60 per cent to maintain the bodily needs of the cow, 40 per cent for the production of milk, first to produce a full flow of milk, secondly to maintain and keep no less than 100 pounds of milk. If the dairyman risks or uses three dollars of his savings to get the feed necessary to produce 100 pounds of milk and you tell him that he cannot have one cent of profit back, I remember he has three dollars back, I remember he had three perfectly good dollars in his pocket to start with, what will he do? He must do what any other business man must do—"quit business before business quits him."

The ancient fiction extending back to where the memory of man unites not to the contrary—that the farmer or dairyman must have no voice in fixing the prices of his productions—has not fully developed the keenness of the dairyman on the selling end of his business.

The present conditions under which milk must be produced absolutely compels the dairyman to either stand up firmly and throw off the shackles that have bound him or quit the business; and is doing the latter, it is not a matter of question of foolish narrowness, or unaptitude, of temper, of a lack of desire to be of use and really do his bit" especially at the exact present time for the good of all concerned.

It is a matter and question of just hard, cold, bread-and-butter business and business self-preservation for the dairyman.

There is another angle to this problem. The dairyman of this land is not real lover of their cows. It has taken them, as before stated, long weary, expensive years to produce them. They dislike to work and plan twenty, thirty and even fifty years to get them, then throw them away just as their life's work is through, their dairy cows most valuable.

The conscientious, thoughtful dairyman is fully aware that when this price fixing and price tinkering has been tried out and ceased and the people have been fed, suffered and repented after the operating on prices), that they will want those same dairy cows back again to convert all the future abundant feed into milk, not only for the baby but all mankind.

It is compelled to quit the production of milk on account of the price being fixed at a much lower price than the average and great majority of dairy men can possibly produce milk and still milk producer still is able to keep and unwilling to actually throw away or sell his dairy cows, what will he do? Being unable to sell his cows do?

Whitewater, Nov. 7.—E. Colton, international secretary of the Y. M. C. A. for foreign work, gave an address here yesterday on the excellent work being done by that organization. Colton's address was given at the Normal school and one at the library hall in the evening. He expects to be sent abroad soon, either to Russia or Italy.

Editor F. R. Bloodgood, T. M. Blackman, Prof. E. G. Lange, W. S. Watson and F. O. Bartlett went to La Grange last evening where a short address was given to the people of that community in favor of the Y. M. C. A. war bond drive.

One last word for the mothers in the thousands of homes that toil and labor to win little loved ones where ever the very commonest necessities of life and even that little in the most stinted, least amounts for food, clothing and fuel are most that is hoped for by them. Hard working, ever-burdened fathers are also to be considered.

Whatever else fails to interest, touch any reader, please do so and in any way to force and press to the lips of thousands of over-worked, over-tired mothers in this land. This inst. cup of deep, bitter sorrow, that in addition to all their burdens that they must hold their babes in their arms day by day and hour by hour and see them starve and die, only to prove that milk is not cheaper or more accessible or available to those who most need it for food at one dollar a quart than at fifteen cents.

That milk cannot be cheaper when the normal, adequate supply of milk has been reduced down to hundreds of quarts each day that should have been held up into the millions of milk each day.

CHICAGO ELECTION IS LOYALTY PLEDGE

Election results of Tuesday in Chicago registered the loyalty of that city to the United States when the Socialists swept Cook county with a popular vote, which will reach above 100,000. The Socialists were defeated by a margin of three to one.

The incomplete figures show that the total vote in Cook county, with about 240,000, of which about 15,000 ballots were cast in the country towns, in quarters where the German-Americans vote, was strong. The Socialists claimed large support. In some of these places they got a heavy poll, but the one that came up to their pre-election forecasts that they would sweep the city and the county.

The independent ticket was left at the post. The results showed that it polled an almost negligible vote.

The raising of the "Camp Fire" brought the electors out to the polls in unusual force for a judicial election. Ordinarily a bench election draws a small vote, as in last year's election when Chicago polled but 171,000 votes.

The election was the most orderly in the history of the election commissioners' office. No violence or friction was present and no one was arrested while near the polls.
